The Medical Images Classification and Identification System I developed utilizes machine learning techniques to accurately classify medical images related to lungs, brain, and skin diseases. By leveraging advanced algorithms, the system analyzes image data to detect abnormalities such as tumors, pneumonia, and skin lesions. Through automated image recognition, it provides faster and more precise diagnostics, assisting healthcare professionals in identifying critical conditions. patient outcomes.